

Nicholas Kontaxis to Present New Work in London

By Modestas Mankus - September 2, 2019

Nicholas Kontaxis, a self-taught abstract artist, will reveal a new body of work in London. Kontaxis, an artist who utilises cosmic canvases and vibrant palletes, will showcase his new work from September 4th to the 10th at 35 Baker Street. The solo exhibition named Reach will be available to the public and is curated by West Contemporary.

Kontaxis, now twenty-three years old, was born with an extensive brain tumour that has resulted in him suffering over 50,000 seizures throughout his life. Kontaxis undergone many surgeries; in fact, he has severe autism, developmental delay and is non-verbal. In some ways, these challenges have made the Kontaxis become the phenomenal artist he is today.

Modestas Mankus

<http://www.mankus.co.uk>

Modestas Mankus is the founder and editor-in-chief at Our Culture Mag. Dedicated to covering all things culture.

